Mrs. M. P. JONES' DEATH.—

Mrs. Carrie Jones, wife of Milton P. Jones, died Saturday afternoon of typhoid fever. Mr. and Mrs. Jones were taken with typhoid fever about eleven days previous to her decease. Mrs. Jones' case became very serious at an early stage and the chances were very largely against her recovery.

Her sister, Miss Fuller, came from Bloomington, Ill., last week to assist in nursing her. Her mother and brother arrived from the same place Saturday afternoon just a short while before she died, but she was then unconscious. Her husband was too ill to be with her in her last hours. The body was taken by the mother, brother and sister on the east-bound express train Saturday night to Bloomington, Ill., for burial.

Deceased was aged about twenty-three years and was married to Mr. Jones at Bloomington in December, 1884. Her maiden name was Fuller. Not long after their marriage Mr. Jones brought his wife back here to reside. Mrs. Jones by her sweet womanly qualities quickly endeared herself to a large circle of friends. She was prompt in assisting the needy and sick, and was especially helpful in nursing the sick at whatever sacrifice of her own ease and comfort. Hence she is most sincerely mourned by those who had experienced her kindly ministrations and also by those who admired her self-sacrificing devotion to those in trouble. Her family has been sadly bereaved within the past eight or ten months, she being the third daughter of Mrs. Fuller to die within that period.

In the death of this good woman the community has suffered a distinct loss, and the sympathy of all go to the husband, mother and family.

BONDS WORTHLESS.—In receding the order of a previous session of the Court levying five cents on the $100 of assessed property in each county for the purpose of paying the interest on the bonds issued to pay the accumulated floating debt of the common-

HERBY C. GRAVES DEAD.—

Henry C. Graves died Sunday night at his home, near Howard's Mill, of congestion of the kidneys from a cold contracted in a harvest field. The funeral was held at the residence at 10 o'clock a. m. Tuesday, the interment being made in the Mt. Sterling Cemetery.

Deceased was aged about 70 years. His wife, who was a daughter of the late John B. Durham, of Morehead, survives him; also their two daughters, Jennie, wife of G. R. Armstrong, of Mt. Sterling, and Alice, wife of Ed Grubbs, of Winchester. Talson Graves, of Mt. Sterling, is a brother. Mr. Graves was a gentleman of the old school, with a savviness of manner and kindness of disposition that endeared him to all who knew him. He was indeed a fine man and a citizen who will be long lamented by his community.

REED'S SHOW.—Reed B. other, little dog and pony show exhibited to a full tent Saturday afternoon and night. The children especially enjoyed it.

W. H. Reed, the chief partner, has been here a number of times with a show, the last time previous to Saturday being a few years ago when his tent boss Dempsey killed an employee named Frank with a stake. Dempsey after being in jail here a few months escaped by means of a key to the front door of the jail ingeniously fabricated out of wood by Dempsey. Dempsey left a note stating that he would return and stand his trial when he could get his witnesses to come back with him, but he forgot to return.

Reed says he sold out the show he had then and traveled last year with a railroad show until he wore himself out. He then quit the business for while, but got too restless until he started the present show. He says he is making more clear money now than ever.

WE ALL RUBBERED.—A crowd of automobiles with four, six and three gentlemen from Lexington on their way to the Olympic Springs stopped here Tuesday afternoon and caused a rubbering if we were GETTING AT THE FACTS.—The census-taker rapped at the door of the little farm house and opened his long book. A plump girl of about eighteen came to the door and blinked at him stupidly. "How many people live here?" he began.

"Nobody lives here. We are only staying through the hop season."

"How many of you are there here?"

"I'm here, Father's in the woodshed and Bill is—"

"See here, my girl, I want to know how many inmates there are in this house. How many people slept here last night?"

"Nobody slept here, sir. I had the toothache dreadful, and my little brother had the stomach ache, and the new hand that's helping us got sunburned so on his back that he has blisters the size of an egg; and we all took on so that nobody slept a wink all night long." "Ladies' Home Journal."

SUNFLOWER PHILOSOPHY.—They say you can always get up an argument by asking this question in a crowd: "What is flirtation?"

Of course a real cross man is hard to get along with, but he is a joy in comparison to the man who is "funny."

When a woman is out of town she worries if the men are kind to her lonesome husband and gets mad if the women are.

When a girl can paint a tree so that every one knows what it is her friends say she has a wonderful insight into nature.

You can break the heart of any girl who has naturally curly hair by asking if she does it up in rings or with an iron.

Now that the spirit of investigation is rampant why not appoint a commission to find out what becomes of the money misad for missionary purposes?

However menial your work, if you do it well, it is difficult to find a person who can take your place.

THE SPELL BROKEN.—They sat out on the lawn listening to the serenade of the frogs. He was proposing.

"Darling," he whispered, "I

A GREAT QUESTION.—We have had the question of prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages before us for so many long years that we have come to look upon the idea as proper in its way, and as almost essential in some localities where the authorities are lax or the percentage of rowdies is large, but the fact remains that this question of prohibiting an article ordinarily used as food or drink is one of the biggest, one of the most far-reaching and one of the most dangerous with which a people ever had to do.

Intemperance is deplorable, and the man who drinks to intoxication should be put without the pale of decent society and so for the saloon that sells to drunken men or to minors or that violates law and order and decency, it should be closed and the owner should never be licensed again; but when it comes to a majority saying to a minority "You shall not have whisky or wine or beer" the bars are thrown down to the most dangerous character of legislation that ever oppressed a nation or gave scope to the ideas under which tyrants are developed.

It may be that a people can tire of liberty; it may be our destiny to move backward as Rome and Greece moved backward from the loftiest freedom to the vilest despotism, but be this as it may we should hesitate before we take one stone from the foundation of these rights won during the past centuries by the heroic ancestors of the Anglo-Saxon people. Such papers as Magna Charta, the Declaration of Independence and the bills of rights of our various States were won by the swords and sealed with the blood of men who knew what tyranny meant—men who swore that their children should be sovereigns unto themselves, and we should pause, and pause long, before giving up to government a single right reserved to the individual by these immortal instruments.

If a majority may prohibit wine or beer or whisky or cigarettes because great harm may come of their abuse then a majority may prohibit the use of tobacco in general, or of tea or coffee or meat, save on certain days, or of certain articles of dress, or of kiss-
